Join our User Feedback Subteam – EnHands e.V.

EnHands e.V. is a non-profit student organization at the Technical University of Munich working to develop accessible upper-limb prostheses for low and middle-income countries. Your work will help us listen to real people and improve prostheses around their needs. We are looking for at least two empathetic and motivated new members.

1. Qualifications

We don't have any strict requirements for new members: beginners are welcome! Here are some skills you could bring:

- Empathy, responsibility and a real passion for helping people
- Experience creating feedback forms or surveys, and some understanding of psychology or user research
- Ability to organize and analyse data
- Speaking more than one language is a big plus; Canva experience is helpful

If you don't have experience in any of these areas but are passionate about learning and contributing to the team, feel free to reach out!

2. What you will do

- Create and improve feedback forms for patients and users
- Analyse responses and share clear, useful findings
- Treat every response with care and respect: it comes from a real person with real needs

3. What we offer

- Practical experience in survey design, data analysis and a student-led charity
- Strong addition to CV through hands-on experience
- Flexible, remote work (e.g., during exam phase) and a 1h meeting every two weeks
- We work on a volunteer basis and thus cannot offer any financial compensation

4. How to apply

If you're interested in joining us, reach out to us at info@enhands.de! Please include your name, course and semester (in case you're a student), and your interests. Including your CV is a plus. We're looking forward to having you in our team!
